What is a vigilante?

A vigilante is someone who takes the law into their own hands. They are typically motivated by a desire to protect their community from crime, but they may also be driven by a personal vendetta or a thirst for revenge.

Vigilantes can be effective in fighting crime, but they can also be dangerous. They often operate outside the law, and they may use violence to achieve their goals. This can lead to innocent people being harmed or killed.

Is vigilantism justified?

There is no easy answer to the question of whether or not vigilantism is justified. Some people believe that it is necessary to protect society from criminals who the law cannot or will not stop. Others believe that vigilantism is a dangerous and lawless practice that can lead to innocent people being harmed.

Ultimately, the decision of whether or not to support vigilantism is a personal one. There are valid arguments to be made on both sides of the issue.
