Gobert's journey to the NBA was not an easy one. He was born in Saint-Quentin, France, and began playing basketball at a young age. He quickly showed promise, and at 16 he moved to the United States to play for a prep school in Virginia. After two years in high school, Gobert signed with the University of Utah. In his two seasons with the Utes, Gobert averaged 9.8 points, 9.8 rebounds, and 3.4 blocks per game. He was named the Pac-12 Defensive Player of the Year in both of his seasons and was also named an All-American in his sophomore year.

Gobert was drafted by the Denver Nuggets with the 27th overall pick in the 2013 NBA Draft. He was traded to the Utah Jazz on draft day, and he has been with the Jazz ever since. In his first few seasons in the NBA, Gobert was a backup center behind Enes Kanter. But in the 2016-17 season, Gobert took over as the Jazz's starting center and has not looked back. In the past five seasons, Gobert has been named to the All-NBA Defensive Team four times and has been named an All-Star three times. He has also led the league in blocks twice.

Gobert's impact on the Jazz has been undeniable. He is the anchor of their defense, and he has helped them become one of the top defensive teams in the league. Gobert is also a valuable offensive player, and he has developed a strong chemistry with Jazz star Donovan Mitchell. The Gobert-Mitchell duo is one of the most potent in the NBA, and they have helped the Jazz become a perennial playoff contender.
