The Early Years

Jack Davis was born in 1925 in New York City. He began drawing at a young age, and by the time he was a teenager, he was selling his work to pulp magazines. In the 1950s, Davis began working for EC Comics, where he created some of his most famous work, including the covers for Tales from the Crypt and The Vault of Horror.

The EC Years

The EC Comics years were a turning point in Davis's career. His work for EC was dark, atmospheric, and often gruesome, and it helped to define the horror genre. Davis's EC covers are some of the most iconic images in horror history, and they continue to influence artists and filmmakers today.

The Later Years

After leaving EC Comics in the late 1950s, Davis continued to work as a commercial artist. He created illustrations for magazines, books, and advertising, and he also worked on a number of film and television projects.

Davis's later work is just as dark and atmospheric as his earlier work, but it also shows a greater sense of maturity and sophistication.

Legacy

Jack Davis died in 2016 at the age of 91. He left behind a legacy of groundbreaking horror art that has influenced generations of artists and filmmakers. Davis's work is a testament to the power of the imagination, and it continues to inspire and frighten audiences today.
