Excerpt from My Country Syrian Memoir

"I remember the day the war came to Damascus like it was yesterday. I was at home with my children, watching television, when we heard a loud explosion. We looked out the window and saw smoke rising from a building down the street. My husband rushed to the scene, and when he came back, he told me that the war had started."

"I couldn't believe it. War? In our country? It didn't seem possible. But it was true. The war had come to Syria, and it was about to change our lives forever."

"We had to flee our home that night. We didn't know where we were going, but we knew we had to get away from the fighting. We packed a few belongings and drove out of Damascus, not knowing if we would ever come back."

"We drove for hours, until we reached the bFree Download with Lebanon. We crossed the bFree Download and found ourselves in a crowded refugee camp. We were safe, but we had lost everything. We had no home, no money, and no food."

"But we were alive. And we had each other. And that was enough."
