But what made Gretzky so special? What was it about his game that made him so dominant? We talked to some of his former teammates and opponents to get their insights.

"He was always one step ahead of everyone else."

Gretzky was known for his incredible hockey IQ. He could anticipate the play better than anyone else on the ice, and he always seemed to know where the puck was going.

"He had the ability to see the game a few seconds before everyone else," said Mark Messier, Gretzky's teammate on the Oilers. "He knew where the puck was going before anyone else, and he could make plays that no one else could."

"He was the best passer I've ever seen."

Gretzky was also known for his incredible passing ability. He had a unique vision for the game, and he could make passes that no one else could see.

"He was the best passer I've ever seen," said Larry Robinson, Gretzky's opponent on the Montreal Canadiens. "He could make passes that no one else could see. He made everyone around him better."

"He was a great leader."

In addition to his on-ice skills, Gretzky was also a great leader. He was always willing to put the team first, and he was always there for his teammates.

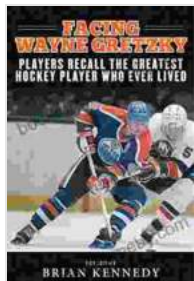

"He was a great leader," said Kevin Lowe, Gretzky's teammate on the Oilers. "He always put the team first. He was always there for his teammates. He was a true leader."

"He was the complete package."

Wayne Gretzky was the complete package. He had the skills, the intelligence, and the leadership to be the greatest hockey player of all time.

"He was the complete package," said Bobby Orr, Gretzky's opponent on the Boston Bruins. "He had everything you could want in a hockey player. He was the best player I've ever seen."
