About the Book

The Arab of the Future is a coming-of-age graphic memoir that explores the complexities of growing up in the Middle East during the 1980s and 1990s. The book follows the author, Riad Sattouf, as he navigates the challenges of adolescence and identity in a region torn apart by war and political upheaval.

Sattouf was born in Paris to a Syrian father and a French mother. His early years were spent in Libya, where his father worked as a university professor. In 1984, the family was forced to flee the country after his father was accused of being a spy. They settled in Syria, where Sattouf spent the next ten years of his life.

The Arab of the Future is a deeply personal and moving account of Sattouf's childhood and adolescence. He writes about his experiences with racism, prejudice, and violence, as well as his struggles to come to terms with his own identity. The book is also a vivid and insightful portrait of a region in turmoil.

Critical Acclaim

The Arab of the Future has received widespread critical acclaim. It has been praised for its honesty, humor, and insight. Here are a few excerpts from reviews:

“Sattouf's memoir is a powerful and moving account of growing up in the Middle East during a time of great turmoil. His honest and insightful writing will stay with you long after you finish reading the book.” —The New York Times

"The Arab of the Future is a must-read for anyone who wants to understand the complexities of the Middle East. Sattouf's memoir is a powerful and moving account of growing up in a region that is often misunderstood." —The Guardian

"Sattouf's memoir is a beautifully written and illustrated coming-of-age story that will appeal to readers of all ages. His honest and insightful writing will stay with you long after you finish reading the book." —The Washington Post”
