Now, in a gripping graphic biography published by SelfMadeHero, the extraordinary life of Harry Haft is brought to life with vivid illustrations and a powerful narrative. This meticulously researched account delves into Haft's harrowing experiences in the Nazi concentration camp and his remarkable journey to become a professional boxer after the war.

From Auschwitz to the Boxing Ring

Harry Haft was born in 1925 in Bełchatów, Poland. In 1940, at the age of 15, he and his family were forced into the Łódź Ghetto. Two years later, he was sent to Auschwitz-Birkenau, where he faced unimaginable suffering and witnessed unspeakable atrocities.

In the depths of despair, Haft found a glimmer of hope in boxing. The Nazis organized fights between prisoners, and Haft's natural athleticism and determination allowed him to survive by winning these brutal matches. He became known as the "Auschwitz Boxer" and his reputation spread throughout the camp.

Liberation and the Path to Boxing

In 1945, Haft was finally liberated from Auschwitz. He weighed only 80 pounds and was physically and emotionally scarred. After the war, he settled in the United States and started a new life. But the memories of his past haunted him.

In an effort to exorcise his demons, Haft decided to pursue his dream of becoming a professional boxer. Despite his age and the challenges he faced, he trained tirelessly and eventually made his debut in 1948. He fought 21 professional bouts, winning 15 and never being knocked out.
