Clock

The wrinkled, rigid fingers,
Those of a blind man, search across the face,
Feeling and probing as each second passes
He has lots of patience
He has time to slowly tick away, those minutes
Until his fingers find the correct combination of digits.
We are all counting down the time
Then he will sing out loud
This is the hour

This is my time
Chiming his joy for all to hear
That old, blind man
Big Ben
For his time has come.

- The Dance of Time

- The Language of the Heart

- The City's Embrace

A Leaf Floated

A leaf floated to the ground
In its silence without a sound

As I stood and watched it fall
There was a purpose to it all

As a death that was foretold
And an ending that was bold

For there is a time for life and laughter
And an ending as your life does matter.
